Springfield near by and carried to the soldiers the hymn books, and shouted: "Now put Watts into them, boys!" which the soldiers did, with the result that the American arms were victorious. After his church in Elizabeth was burned Mr. Caldwell continued to hold his religious services in the red store.

It was well known that he was at all times in danger of death, the enemy having determined to take his life, but he continued undaunted and persistently to pursue what he considered his duty. When he preached, he first placed his pistols on the improvised pulpit and a sentinel was usually kept watching at the door. He was killed with a shot from a sentinel at Elizabeth on November 24, 1781. James Caldwell frequently preached at the old church at Horse Neck (which we now call Caldwell), then located on the site of the present Presbyterian Church. He was beloved by all who knew him, and the town of Caldwell bears his name as a token of the reverence and love of those who lived in those trying colonial days.

Inscription on the Monument to the Memory of James Caldwell, Erected Over His Remains in the Graveyard of the First Presbyterian Church of Elizabethtown, New Jersey

On the East side—

"This Monument is erected to the memory of the REV. JAMES CALDWELL, the pious and fervent Christian, the zealous and faithful Minister, the eloquent Preacher, and a prominent leader among the worthies who secured the independence of his country. His name will be cherished in the Church and in the State so long as virtue is esteemed or patriotism honored."

On the South side—

"JAMES CALDWELL, born in Charlotte Co., Va., April, 1734: Graduated at Princeton College, 1759; Ordained Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Elizabethtown, 1762. After serving as Chaplain in the Army of the Revolution, and acting as Commissary to the Troops in New Jersey, he was killed by a shot from a sentinel at Elizabethtown Point, Nov. 24th, 1781."

On the West side—

"HANNAH, wife of Rev. James Caldwell, and daughter of John Ogden, of Newark, was killed at Connecticut Farms by a shot from a British soldier, Jan. 25th, 1780. Cruelly sacrificed by the enemies of her husband and her country."

On the North side—

"The memory of the Just is blessed."

"Be of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God, and let the Lord do that which is good in his sight."

"The glory of Children are their Fathers."

Caldwell of Springfield

By Biet Harte

Here's the spot. Look around you. Above, on the height,

Lay the Hessians encamped. By that church on the right stood the gaunt Jersey farmers. And here ran a wall—You may dig anywhere and you'll turn up a ball.

Nothing more. Grasses spring, waters run, flowers blow, Pretty much as they did ninety-three years ago.

Nothing more, did I say? Stay, one moment, you've heard

Of Caldwell, the parson, who once preached the Word. Down at Springfield? What! no? Come, that's bad;

why he had—All the Jerseys athwart and they gave him the name

Of "the old high priest." He stuck in their rage, For he loved the Lord God, and he hated King George!

Did he preach—did he pray? Think of him, as you stand

By the old church, to-day; think of him, and that band

Of militant playboys! See the smoke and the heat, Or that reckless advance—of that straggling retreat! Keep the ghost of that wife, foully slain, in your view—And what could you, what should you, what would you do?

Why, just what he did! They were left in the lurch, For the want of more wadding. He ran to the church, Broke the door, stripped the pews, and dashed out in the road.

With his arms full of hymn-books, and threw down his load.

At their feet! Then, above all the shouting and shots, Rang his voice—"Put Watts into 'em, boys! give 'em Watts!"

And they did. That is all. Grasses spring, flowers blow, Pretty much as they did ninety-three years ago.

You may dig anywhere and turn up a ball, But not always a hero like this—and that's all.

Diederick: "'Tis well. Come, measure out their due."

(The debt is paid. The scarlet coat examined by the Indians, the weaving measured off, the kettles handed over. The Indians watch intently, Captahem seemingly indifferent.)

Hendrick George: "We have made a fair bargain. Bid him make his mark."

Diederick (producing document with great seal attached): "Sign, O chief, and we, too, will sign, and our Governor Carteret will confirm."

Captahem (taking quill): "'Tis goodly land, white men."

Jacobs: "Make thy mark here, chief."

Captahem (making a mark upon the place indicated): "'Tis done here, white men." (He pushes away the paper and steps back.)

Diederick (motioning his men together): "And now farewell, Captahem. May our trade please thee as well as it will ourselves."

Captahem: "Stay, white men. Smoke with us the pipe of peace, that thy land which was our land may prosper."

Jacobs: "Come, have done with these savages."

Diederick: "Nay, 'tis best to agree. What harm comes from the poor heathen custom. Sit ye down, men."

(They and the chief sit. The pipe of peace is lit and passed. Each man puffs twice. At a signal from Diederick the whites rise and the Red men, also.)

Diederick: "Farewell, O chief. Peace be with thy people."

Captahem: "And with thine, white men."

(A runner steps forth to guide the Dutch. They depart. The Indians start to gather up their spoil. Captahem stops them and stands over his barter for a moment, then he turns to the hills.)

Captahem (raising a hand): "Have I done well, Great Spirit?"

NOTE. The deed given by Captahem to these four shrewd Dutchmen was clearly defined in its boundaries, to wit: "a straight line drawn from the mouth of Pine Brook a little to the north of Cedar Grove, extending to the village of Acquackonuk." From this deed the very earliest settlers derived their titles.

Act I—Scene II.

"The Departure of the Indians."

1740.

The Delawares Join the Six Nations at Seneca Lake.

Settlers in early Dutch costume assemble at right stage. They are of all ages—men, women and children—all gaily dressed and wearing the wooden shoes, made at that time at Horseneck, as the land was then called. (See History of Essex.) The company are evidently awaiting an event, and in the meantime the men smoke their long pipes, the women knit and gossip. A very old grandfather, leaning on a stove, discourses to the others. Presently he points, and a band of Indians are seen approaching. They come to bid farewell, for their tribe is to depart for the shore of Seneca Lake. They bear gifts of baskets, game and flowers for the friendly whites. A ceremony ensues of presentation, and at its conclusion the Indians offer the Dutch a small boy of seven or eight as their parting proof of trust and affection. This child—afterward to be celebrated as "Indian John" in history, is at first declined, but the Indians prevail. The little fellow, frightened, cries, and is consoled by the kindly Dutch good wives. The Indians depart. Farewells are waved. Indian John is raised to the shoulders of one of the Dutch men. The scene concludes with the Dutch children dancing in a circle about their new playmate.

Act I—Scene III.

"The Horseneck Riots."

The Land Disputes Resulting from Indian Deeds

A crowd of citizens are discovered excitedly disputing the claims of the Newark citizens to their land. The Horseneck settlers display papers and argue with one another. They indicate that the log cabin to right of stage is a matter of legal interest. Its owner is especially indignant. They are interrupted by the arrival of a messenger on horseback from Newark, evidently a deputy. His self-important manner and his formidable pistols enrage the settlers. He produces a paper, but before it is read he is set upon by the crowd. They almost succeed in dragging him from his horse when reinforcements in the form of other armed deputies arrive. These drive back the unarmed Horseneck men, who retire off stage in confusion. The deputies then pillage the log cabin, driving forth a woman and a child and pitching contents from the windows. Finally they nail a paper to the door and are departing when the Horseneck men reappear. This time the settlers are armed with cudgels, pistols and staves. A fight ensues—the deputies escape. Then the Horseneck citizens, led by Thomas Gould, flag in hand, decide to follow and to raid the Newark jail and to liberate their comrades imprisoned for disobeying the order to vacate land and yield claims to the Newark citizens. The scene closes with their spirited departure.

Notes: See "History of Essex," Caldwell, Essex, 1896, page 879.

Settler members include: John the cooper, John Thomas Spier, Squire, Samuel, Ebenezer, and the Low, Thomas, George, and John.

Thomas Gould: "I would the rest of you all lived in the village as well as the town, for I have been disappointed in both places."

Thomas Gould (crasping a flag and holding high above the others): "Harken to me, fellow citizens!"

Crowd: "Yea, we will, Thomas Gould!"

Thomas Gould: "Have we not lost our land?"

Others: "Yea, we have."

Thomas Gould: "Did we buy our land with gold, with silver, or with the trade of the Indians?"

Others: "Yea, we did!"

Thomas Gould: "I will go to the lands in Newark, and teach these robbers a lesson. In the Newark and in our neighbors, and I will impress on them, slave on the door, and liberate them. We will teach the new owner to stand twice before he sends away our slaves. Have courage, ladies, we are just men, and I demand our rights!" The others applaud and wave their slaves, etc.

Thomas Gould: "The Newark and! We call upon you, Hetheld, men, and defend our rights!" After a moment.

Act II—Scene I. "Fairfield Village."

Washington's Visit to the Old Stone Fort.

The village of Fairfield grows up in early settlement, the town of Hetheld. At once, the people of the town of Hetheld, and the people of the village of Fairfield, are in a state of rivalry.

The scene opens with the departure of the village of Fairfield, and the people of the town of Hetheld, and the people of the village of Fairfield, are in a state of rivalry.

say you. But I am not with you, I am under your apple tree."

Saunders (claiming a chair): "You are my servant, sir, Goody, when the wench is a chair under the apple tree, you are a Washington!"

Goody, the landlady, places a chair under the apple tree for Gen. Washington, and retires inside the inn. The landlady appears with a man, an order. His wife follows, a comely woman with two children clinging to her skirts. He places her reverently before his visitor and stands, soldier fashion, at his elbow. Washington calls one of the children in line, and strokes the little one's hair. The others gather about.

Washington: "This is your good wife, Master Saunders."

Mistress Saunders (on stage, her hand on her forehead): "This is a visit to remember, our lives are long, Excellency!"

(Washington speaks with her.)

Citizens approach at right, stage one, two, and three. The children greet them and point to the visitor. The citizens, astounded and delighted, surround them. The crowd grows. Washington is surrounded. They cheer and request a speech.

He coolly, naturally, consents, and with his hand upon the head of a child, addresses the assembled men, women, and children. They applaud wildly. A boy turns and springs.

Suddenly, some circumstances that concern Hetheld is apart. He is in a state of silence. He is pushed away and made to retreat. Washington. He resists, and a struggle results.

The attention of Washington is directed to Hetheld. He strikes the child, and demands to know what his business is. The citizens, who are now about Hetheld, are in a state of silence.

Washington, who is now about Hetheld, is in a state of silence.

Washington: "Say you, I am Master Hetheld."

Hetheld (sitting on the ground): "I am."

Washington: "And you are a man of war, are you not, Master Hetheld?"

The Crowd: "Yea, we are a man of war, are you not, Master Hetheld?"

Washington: "I am a man of war, are you not, Master Hetheld?"

Hetheld: "I am a man of war, are you not, Master Hetheld?"

Washington: "I am a man of war, are you not, Master Hetheld?"

Washington: "I am a man of war, are you not, Master Hetheld?"

Hetheld: "I am a man of war, are you not, Master Hetheld?"

Villagers: "In your honor, Excellency!"

The May pole is set up. Washington is seated in rustic state. Lads and lassies dance. A peddler of rustic wares drifts on. The landlord offers cider. A fiddler bows away. When the dance is ended, Washington rises, summons the landlord and requests his bill. The landlord refuses his gold piece and shows Washington his musket. Washington takes the musket, holds it aloft and addresses the crowd.

Washington: "An excellent musket, friends."

A Voice: "Yea, and used." (The crowd cheer.)

Washington (to Saunders): "Would you give it me, Master Sanders?"

Sanders: "Yea, General; but I value it."

Washington: "I have a use for it, I promise you." (The crowd draw closer.) "Citizen Hetfield." (Hetfield, astonished, steps forward.)

Washington: "I have a musket, an excellent musket, citizen; take it and use it to fight for a freeman's principles."

(Hetfield, overcome at the magnanimity, kneels and accepts the gift. The crowd are wild with enthusiasm while they cheer. Washington turns and mounts his horse. They rally about him. He waves farewell, uses his spurs and vanishes. The crowd still cheer, while Hetfield, at centre stage, stands gravely, with fixed eyes, holding his gun.)

NOTE—Saunders' Tavern was built in 1748. It was torn down in 1848 and the stones in the foundation of the First Baptist Church.

Act II—Scene II.

"Caldwell's Hero."

Scene is Supposed to be at the Bridge at Springfield.

The rear of the British are seen in retreat. They are pursued by the Minute Men, although these brave lads are having difficulty with their muskets.

Officer (seeing his men slacken their fire): "Come, lads, come!"

Minute Men: "Our wadding is giving out."

Another: "Mine is gone!"

Officer: "No wadding! And we have them on the run! Zounds!"

Minute Man (dropping musket, his head in his hands): "My last shot, that!"

Officer (in despair): "Halt! Pursue no further."

(The Rev. James Caldwell stumbles on in great haste. He calls to the men: "Have courage, lads—there is no dearth of wadding in my good church yonder." He rushes to the church and enters.)

Minute Man: "Yea, heed the parson."

(Caldwell reappears with his arms filled with hymn books.)

Caldwell: "Halt! Never, lads! Here is wadding of the best. Take my hymn books, lads. Give 'em Watts—give 'em Watts!"

(The Minute Men rush to him and begin to tear out the leaves and wad their guns, shouting meanwhile.)

"Yea, Parson, give 'em Watts!"

(They rush forward, the Parson snatches the gun of a wounded man. Caldwell, his voice above the others as he joins them): "Wadding, yea, good wadding! Give 'em Watts—give 'em Watts!"

NOTE—Parson Caldwell was a frequent visitor to Farnfield. His numerous ministrations to the early settlers was the reason for their adoption of the name "Caldwell." He thus belongs to its history.

Act II—Scene III.

"Caldwell is Named."

The first town meeting was in 1799. The citizens assemble on the green. To the left a culprit in stocks is seen—Samuel Denman, accused of stealing sheep. On the right the women and children, properly awed, remain at a respectful distance. Many have brought milking stools and use these as seats—others sit upon the grass. The women knit and sew, a few bring spinning wheels.

Benches are placed centre stage for the important citizens and the ceremony of election begins. A moderator is elected and takes his place in a large chair. After this the ballots for other officers are shaken up in the beaver loaned for the occasion. This done, the entire body congratulates itself and assumes the official manner. They arrange the benches in a half circle, the moderator presiding. A large bell is rung and the crier sings out.

Crier: "Citizens, assemble." (The women and children rise and gather about him.)

Moderator: "Louder, crier!"

Crier: "This town, now, being a town of size and importance, is resolved upon town officers and these be duly elected."

A Small Boy: "Hurrah!"

Moderator: "Mistress Crane, hush your son—'tis unseemly and lacking in respect. Proceed, crier."

Crier (rings bell again and swells with importance): "I—town crier—am instructed by the town officers to announce that in sober thought and with due regard to his valor and service they are resolved to name this town after Parson Caldwell." (Louder.) "Long life and prosperity to this town—Caldwell!" (All cheer wildly. Master Crane flings an apple at the Moderator.)

A Voice: "Three cheers for Caldwell!" (More cheering, until the crier again rings his bell.)

All

Moderator

Boy: "Three men fired blunderbusses as a welcome and a fine mess they made."

(Confusion among the citizens. A delegation are about to set forth for further news when cheers announce their approach.)

Young Man: "'Tis not serious, for here they come."

(Two young girls throw flowers.)

(Hats come off, and the Moderator and his wife advance. The coach approaches, stops, and Gen. Lafayette and Decatur alight.)

Moderator: "Welcome, Gen. Lafayette, and welcome, Mr. Decatur. We are honored by your presence."

Gen. Lafayette: "Your servant, sir, and madam." (Bows.)

Decatur: "Your servant, your servant, dear lady." (The Moderator's wife curtsies. A child presents a wreath to each. They thank her and bow. Shouting off stage indicates the approach of the cannon to be presented to Caldwell by Mr. Decatur in the name of his brother. Boys drag in the cannon, which is gaily decorated with red, white and blue ribbands and flower garlands. The Moderator introduces Decatur to the crowd and they applaud. He steps forward and speaks.)

Decatur: "I welcome this opportunity to honor our noble dead, and leave this wreath here in commemoration of their sacrifice."

Moderator: "And we are honored by the presence of our distinguished visitors. As citizens of a free country, we shall remember and revere this date. In the name of Fairfield, thank you!" (Cheers.)

Decatur: "As a man of few words, I can only add, may prosperity and peace ever remain among us." (All cheer.)

Gen. Lafayette (laying his wreath beside the others): "I, too, feel honored that I am permitted to pay this tribute to those who were my noble comrades." (More cheering.)

Moderator: "Believe me, sir, it is an occasion for history."

Lafayette (bowing): "Thanks, sir; and now may I express my regret that important events claim my attention and that we must only remain these brief moments."

Moderator: "But first we must drink a toast to our guests and to our country."

Moderator's Wife (filling glasses and giving to Lafayette): "Here, sir, and here, Mr. Decatur." (They accept the glasses and all gather about Lafayette.)

Moderator: "A toast." (All raise their glasses.)

Decatur: "To our brave comrade of France." (Glasses.)

Lafayette: "To your brave countrymen who are my comrades."

Moderator: "Peace, Prosperity and Freedom."

All: "Freedom."

Act III—Scene II.

Drilling Day on the Green.

At left stage a booth is set up trimmed with bunting and wreathed with flowers. At centre stage is a small platform with a seat upon it for the fiddler. When the scene opens the tender of the booth is seen arranging his wares; popcorn, candy, lemonade, etc. Strains of a fiddle are heard and the fiddler at the head of a band of merry-makers approaches. These are principally young men and maidens, and small children, all in holiday attire. They seat the fiddler with mock ceremony. He bows and addresses them. They demand a dance and he strikes up "Money Musk." They are interrupted by the arrival of a stagecoach of visitors. They are driven on in the old stagecoach and descend, burdened with carpet bags and boxes. In the confusion of greetings, bustle, etc., a little boy—Grover Cleveland—is forgotten. He strays beneath the horses' feet and would have been killed had not Mrs. Crane sprung to his rescue. With the child in her arms she is surrounded and congratulated on her bravery. Grover is not hurt and presently is enjoying himself as usual. The Moderator and his wife arrive and a reviewing committee form at right. Now enter the squad of volunteers. All in a motley array of uniforms they march on and go through a drill. To their embarrassment the company applaud them wildly. After a few minutes of drill they are so exhausted that lemonade is brought them by the fair admirers and they are fanned with the hats of their rivals. A boy appears bearing a grotesque scare-crow figure dressed in the scarlet coat of the British soldier. The company hoot and jeer. The fiddler strikes up the strains of Yankee Doodle and a procession is formed, with the fiddler and the scare-crow at its head. They make a detour of the stage and disappear in a gay and disorderly rout. Alone the vender is left counting his pennies and shaking his head at his evident disappointment.

Act III—Scene III.

The Return of the Boys in Blue.

A reviewing stand is seen at center stage, trimmed with bunting and draped with a huge national flag. A group of young people enter, girls in crinoline and men in the gay waistcoats and stocks of the period. They set to work to further ornament the stand.

Miss Featherpate: "Oh, I am so excited! I wish I had worn my other bonnet now!"

Entrance to Knollwood, opposite Grover Cleveland Park

Winding road around the summit of a Knoll

“Knollwood,” Caldwell, New Jersey

Formerly the Resident Estate of Mr. Thomas S. Gladding

After the Pageant the “Knollwood” Stages, in waiting at Lane Avenue Entrance, will carry visitors through the property free of charge

A number of attractive houses have been built upon the property, and these are ready for immediate occupancy. If they are not just what you require we shall be pleased to build for you in any location you select, planning with you to meet your special needs as to number and arrangement of rooms, etc.

Wherever you build in Knollwood, there will be pleasing vistas from every window and porch.

There are all proper restrictions, and references are required. The prices are moderate and the terms easy.

Knollwood is not such a very large estate, and its plan does not admit very many houses. The choice of lots, if there can be a choice, should be made without delay.

The Oldest Fan Tosses the First Ball of the Season

On the afternoon of July 5th, following the Pageant
Caldwell vs. The Holy Name Society of Montclair.

No one who saw last year's contest between these two teams will forget that thrilling ten-inning contest which resulted in Caldwell's favor by the narrow margin of one run.
